SATURDAY, MAY 7

Arromanches; Longues-sur-Mer; and Bayeux

The seaside village of Arromanches; the German gun batteries at Longues-sur-Mer; and the city of Bayeux — its tapestry, cathedral and the British cemetery. Across verdant countryside, we drive to Arromanches and view remnants of the artificial harbor — codenamed Mulberry — from the cliffs above before descending to the village and proceeding a few miles west to the German gun batteries at Longues-sur-Mer, the best preserved of Hitler's entire vaunted Atlantic Wall; enjoy lunch together at a country inn, l'Auberge des Monts in Ryes.

Continue to the medieval city of Bayeux to view the historic tapestry, depicting how William the Conqueror invaded England with his Norman army in 1066, the most important pictorial images of the era. Then we will stroll through the nearby heartrending British Cemetery.

Return to Cabourg for dinner at your leisure — perhaps taking time to unwind along the pedestrian walk on Cabourg's oceanfront in this town immortalized by Marcel Proust, the French novelist (1871-1922) who favored the Grand Hotel and wrote one of the most famous novels of the twentieth century, "Remembrance of Things Past."

Overnight: Grand Hôtel Cabourg

SUNDAY, MAY 8

Caen; Pegasus Bridge; the home of Marie-Louise Osmont, diarist of the occupation and liberation

The city of Caen, its Memorial Museum, the Pegasus Bridge. We journey to the heart of Caen, the capital and principal city of Lower-Normandy, as well as the location of the University of Caen founded in 1432 and utterly destroyed in 1944. Here we visit the Caen Memorial, a Museum of Peace and of the Battle of Normandy. The museum teaches history using visual media rather than objects or relics. However, it does include interesting exhibits such as a German Enigma coding machine and a vivid map of the D-Day invasion.

Lunch on your own in either the museum's restaurant or sandwich shop.

Returning to Cabourg, we view the home of Marie-Louise Osmont, author of an extraordinary diary about the German occupation and the liberation; and we stop at the Pegasus Bridge where the first Allied troops (British) landed on French soil shortly after midnight on June 6th.

Overnight: Grand Hôtel Cabourg

MONDAY, MAY 9

Honfleur

Today we explore a stretch of France's coast known as the Côte Fleurie (Flowering Coast) by driving to Honfleur, a historic port tucked between two hills that owes its distinctive character to geography. Originally a fortress town to keep English ships from wandering too far up the Seine estuary, its mariners helped to establish the French presence in Quebec.

Honfleur became a hub of the Impressionist movement after Eugene Boudin (1824-1898) began painting the sky, the sea, and the shoreline of Normandy. One of his many followers was Claude Monet (1840-1926). Boudin's legacy was more than a fine collection of paintings. He began a tradition that still flavors the charming ambience of Honfleur, which boasts more than 95 art galleries.

We will arrive in Honfleur for the opening of the Eugene Boudin Museum at ten o'clock, followed by lunch on your own in the bistro of your choice around the old Harbor.

Return to Cabourg to enjoy dinner at the hotel during our final night in this elegant town.

Overnight: Grand Hôtel Cabourg

TUESDAY, MAY 10

Caen; the hedgerow country; Saint-Lô and the Château de Canisy

Check out of the hotel to begin our day whose final destination will be Château de Canisy, six miles west of Saint-Lô. We drive via Caen to see the Abbaye-aux-Hommes (Abbey for Men) founded by William the Conqueror in the 11th century, now the City Hall; and visit the abbey church, Église Saint-Étienne (Church of Saint Stephen), the finest example of Norman Romanesque architecture in the region, and the site of grave of William, who died in 1087.

Continue toward Saint-Lô, pausing to retrace the footsteps of Sgt. Thomas B. Rouse of Medina, Texas – the Hill 192, and the crossroads called Le Calvaire where he was fatally wounded on July 11, 1944. From our viewpoint, we have a visual perspective of the first five weeks of the Normandy campaign, from Omaha Beach inland. In Saint-Lô, we tour war-related sites. The town was almost completely destroyed in June and July of 1944. We will stop at the statue of the U.S. Army Major Thomas D. Howie and hear about "The Clay Pigeons of Saint-Lô," commanded by Lt. Col. Glover Johns of Austin, Texas.

Lunch on your own in the center of Saint-Lô before proceeding to the Château de Canisy.

Cocktails and dinner at the château, a remarkable national historic building and family estate set amidst an expanse of English and French gardens, ponds, forests and trails.

Overnight: Château de Canisy

WEDNESDAY, MAY 11

“Operation Cobra”, the historic town of Avranches; Mont Saint Michel

We begin by retracing the route of the American breakthrough of German defenses – "Operation Cobra" on July 25th – then on to Mont Saint Michel where we have a guided tour of the great monastery, a UNESCO World Heritage Site, founded in the year 708 AD. En route, we stop in the historic hilltop town of Avranches to visit the Patton Monument where the general established his headquarters after the break through.

Then to Mont Saint Michel, one of Europe's most unforgettable sights and religious edifices. Set on an island in a mesmerizing sea, the view has inspired awe and imagination for thirteen centuries. Lunch on your own in one of numerous cafes and restaurants on the ground level of the ancient abbey, which did not figure in warfighting.

Cocktails and dinner at the château.

Overnight: Château de Canisy

THURSDAY, MAY 12

Sainte Mère Église;

La Fièvre Bridge, Utah Beach

Morning departure for Sainte Mère Église, the center of the American paratrooper landings. On the village square, visit the parish church with its touching stained-glass memorials to the American liberators and the highly personalized Paratrooper Museum.

Drive west from Sainte Mère Église to see "Iron Mike," the statue of a mythical American Paratrooper at the historic La Fièvre Bridge where the Germans put up a bitter, unsuccessful defense to stop the American offensive across the Cherbourg peninsula. Then, we stroll the shoreline of Utah Beach and view numerous museums in the area.

We take our group lunch in Sainte-Marie-du-Mont a small town known for its fresh seafood and farm produce. En route back to Canisy, we visit two of the most emotional and stirring sites in Normandy: Angoville au Plain, a scene of great humanity; and Graignes, where enormous tragedies were committed against French civilians.

Reconvene with the group for cocktails and dinner in the château.

Overnight: Château de Canisy

FRIDAY, MAY 13

German Cemetery; Pointe du Hoc; Omaha Beach; and the Normandy American Cemetery

We go first to the German cemetery at La Cambe. Each of the more than 21,000 graves is marked with a dark volcanic stone, making it a solemn contrast to the British and American cemeteries. The somber atmosphere begins at the entrance, so narrow that you must enter one-by-one, symbolizing that death as is a lonely journey.

Then to Pointe du Hoc, site of the famed assault on D-Day up 100-foot cliffs by U. S. Army Rangers commanded by Lt. Col. Earl Rudder, later President of Texas A&M University, to knock out its powerful guns. The Allied high command believed the guns imperiled the American landings on Omaha and Utah Beaches. When Rudder returned the first time in 1954, he gazed down the cliffs and mused to himself, "Will you tell me how we did this? Anybody would be a fool to try this. It was crazy then and it's crazy now.

Next to the nearby scenic coastal town of Grandcamp-Maisy for a group lunch at a family restaurant, La Trinquette. Proceed to Omaha Beach, continuing to Normandy American Cemetery to contemplate 9,387 perfectly aligned white marble crosses and Stars of David, lending an air of optimism, brightness and triumph to the lives lost in battle. Be sure to view the memorial with its mosaic maps and visit the chapel, taking time to observe the ceiling and inscriptions. The Wall of the missing is inscribed with 1,557 names.

Return to Château de Canisy for dinner.

Overnight: Château de Canisy
